Giving names, dates and places in detail, he tells how the Bay State Cas Company, in league with the Whitney machine, got a charter by wholesale brib. He has told them that by the end ery. Then turning his attention to the three great insurance companies, the New York Life, Equitable and Mutual, he says that he has been approached by an agent of these companies with threats of what they would do if he brought tate the greatest financial power in the world, he says he will not be turned aside. He prints the fac-simile letter from President McCall, of the New York Life, to an Ohio policy holder, attributing Lawson's attack to the company's refusal to issue him a policy. At the same time another letter from McCall his assertion that the New York Life has still large investments in stock securies. He does not advise policy hold ers, however, to discontinue premiums, but he makes them feel rather uncomfortable. Indeed his articles are calcu-"gilt edged."
